Sean Swarner Can Turn Your World Upside Down.

SEAN SWARNER

Sean Swarner twice was given just weeks to live. Twice, he not only survived but thrived. He was the first cancer patient to summit Mt. Everest, a heartfelt move designed to inspire cancer patients around the world from the highest place on Earth. He didn't stop there. Sean went on to climb the highest peak on each of the seven continents, then completed the Hawaii Ironman Triathlon and, most recently, made a historic trek to the South Pole where he was filmed for a new Grape-Nuts campaign and where he celebrated 25 years cancer free!

From the moment that he was diagnosed with Hodgkin's lymphoma at 13, then Askin's sarcoma at 16, Sean has set out to defy the odds and become living proof that we can all overcome the obstacles in our paths and live the life of our dreams.

Besides his outdoor pursuits, Sean is author of Keep Climbing, which chronicles his journey up Everest, and he's the founder of cancerclimber.org, a nonprofit that grants cancer patients their own adventures of a lifetime.

A popular motivational speaker who shares his story around the world, Sean has been dubbed one of the most inspirational persons of our era—a favorite with cancer patients everywhere as well as FORTUNE 500® companies, local nonprofits, and healthcare organizations. In addition to his public speaking, Sean is frequently sought out to interact with youths and he has made it a goal to visit schools and classrooms across the nation to engage one-on-one with students of all ages.
